What does this mean? Some questions and answers about the call process in our Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod (WELS):

When a teacher/pastor receives a Call, does it mean the teacher/pastor went out looking for a job?

No. That's not how our call process works. They were not interviewing or seeking a position. A congregation or a school calls them "out of the blue." Our synod's Commission on Lutheran Schools (CLS), in cooperation with the district president there, works with the leadership team at a congregation/school to create a list of candidates nationwide who have some or many of the gifts and talents that they are looking for. Then that congregation votes on who to call. The called individual doesn't know anything about the call until it comes. We don't operate like the business world where people post resumes and network, looking for job opportunities. When we receive a call, we have done nothing to try and get it (Hebrews 5:4, Romans 10:15). It is a divine call, which comes from the Holy Spirit through the group that does the calling (Acts 13:1-3, 20:28).

Does receiving a call mean that the teacher/pastor is leaving?

Not necessarily. What this means is that the teacher/pastor now has a call to serve in two places: one where they currently serve and one at the congregation/school that has called them. The teacher/pastor's job now is to decide where they think God can use them best for the good of His ministry. They can either decline this call and continue in their current situation, or they can accept this call and go to serve in that new part of God's kingdom. Questions that they are going to try to answer over the next few weeks might be: Am I still working well here at my current congregation/school? Would I be of more use to the kingdom here or at this new call? Where am I most needed, and where are my gifts best suited? What would be best for my family? Etc.

What does it mean if a teacher/pastor accepts a call?

It means that God is going to use them to bless his kingdom in another place – nothing more, nothing less - because ultimately, whether they are here or there, we are all on the same team. It does not mean that they are betraying their current congregation/school or that they don't want to be a part of that ministry anymore. It doesn't mean that the new congregation/school is enticing them away from us with better pay or benefits or any other material considerations (WELS uses a standard salary and benefits matrix to compensate its called workers). Their decision has everything to do with what they feel is best for God's kingdom, and where they and their family fit into that picture. When a teacher accepts a call to leave Crown of Life, we will work with Pastor Klatt, our Minnesota District President, and the Commission on Lutheran Schools to start putting together a Call list for our new vacancy.

What should we as a congregation/school do when someone receives a call?

Pray for them. Pray that God would give them wisdom to make a decision best for his callings of spouse, father/mother, and called worker, as well as the contentment that comes with it. Pray too for the ministries of both congregations, that all our people would remember with calm confidence that Christ is the head of the Church and will certainly see to it that his people are provided for. Also, talk to them– either in person, on the phone, or through an email. Tell them what you think about the two calls that they now have. They would certainly welcome your input.

When will a called worker make a decision?

There is no guarantee and no official deadline, but usually calls are deliberated for about 3-4 weeks.
